LONDON -Prince Philip resurrected the LONDON —Prince Philip resurrected the ancient race of Cockneys Wednesday.

He did it by ringing the world-famous Bow bells for the first time since they were silenced at the start of the Second World War.

Legend has it that only those born within the sound of the bells of St. Mary-Le-Bow in the heart of the city of London can claim to be genuine Cockneys.

About four hours after Philip rang the bells a boy was born in Whitechapel Hospital, within hearing distance, and it was believed that his birth was the first of a Cockney in 22 years.

The Deep Wound

THE CHANGE IN MR. NEHRU'S thinking-a neutralist and man of peace turned aggressor-is the obvious and dramatic news from India this week. But it is not the most important.

An armed attack on three helpless Portuguese territories was much less Portuguese territories and ag-more than an act of unilateral aggression, planned in advance. It was a successful challenge to the United Nations which, frustrated by a Russian veto, did nothing and could do nothing. Perhaps Mr. Adlai Stevenson was speaking under the emotion of the moment when he said that these events might lead to the United Nations' death. But if his statement was an exaggera-tion there can be no doubt that the United Nations has suffered a grave

It is useless to argue, as the Indian ambassador to Canada argues, that the people of Goa were ill-governed by Portugal and will be well governed by India. Even if this is true the fact remains that India deliberately broke the Coven-ant of the United Nations, and by its act contradicted the repeated statements of Mr. Nehru against aggression and in favor of peace.

That the crime against Portugal was a small one, with happily little bloodshed, cannot excuse it. On the contrary, Mr. Nehru, attacking other nations for similar offences, has himself set a precedent which can and no doubt will be used by more dangerous aggressors to justheir future crimes.

It is also useless to argue that Portugal is a brutal dictatorship and deserves no sympathy. By that definition many of the United Nations' members deserve no sympathy. If there is to be a rule of law in the United Nations—its whole purpose-then the law must be enorced equally among all members. It is not enforced among the strong because they can resist it, by veto if necessary.

The dangerous precedent of Goa cannot be disguised or extenuated by the sudden decision of the United Nations to condemn Portugal's colonial policies in Africa. Undoubtedly they deserve condemnation but they have nothing to do with, and cannot be used to condone India's breach of the Covenant. Two wrongs do not make a right. One crime does not excuse another in any court. And the end result of these events, as Mr. Stevenson says, is to weaken and endanger the United Nations which India, more than any great nation, has extolled.

There is another result, temorarily hidden by polite words but certain to emerge later on. India has deeply divided the Common-wealth. Its act in Goa was publicly 'regretted"-or in the suave language of diplomacy condemnedthe governments of Britain, Canada, Australia and Pakistan, and probably regretted privately by others. When India is supposed to be the Commonwealth's vital link with Asia this breach is extremely grave and its final consequences incalcu-

Nehru has sowed the seeds of distrust between the Western and the Eastern elements of the Commonwealth-and this at a time when India's whole economic future depends on Western aid, especially aid from the United States.

Not only has he shaken the Commonwealth but he has made it in-creasingly difficult for the United States government to secure essential aid from a shocked Congress. Did he foresee that particular consequence? If so, why did he invite it when obviously India, with a little patience, would have possessed the Portuguese colonies by peaceful negotiation in any case?

Instead, he has preferred to anger his real friends in the West FROM WASHINGTON while Russia, of course, rallies to his support and China approves his actions though continuing to press against India's northern frontier. Hypocrisy can go no further.

in the explosion of nationalism among the under-developed nations, former colonies of the white man who now pays the price of his ancient crimes. More explosions will certainly follow in Asia and Africa. For generations at least, it survives, the world must live with constant shock and danger.

That being inevitable in a century of world revolution, it is bootfor statesmen to waste their time on lamentation for mistakes already made by India and many other states. If possible, the shaken United Nations should be repaired

tional Unions not to treat Canadians as if they were Texans or New Yorkers, is timely indeed, He also spoke the truth when he told them that "Canada is an independent nation and Canadians are very determined not to be regarded as if they were citizens of a 51st state."

It is indeed encouraging to find that, at least, we have a person high in our CLC who is not afraid to speak up for those who pay his salary. Too long, have we watched our heads of our international labor unions knuckle down to the decisions made by the union bosses in their plush offices over the border. It is, about time that the rank and file of labor uninists were heard.

As a member of a railway union, I have found in my dealings with the "higher-ups" in our international union, that they ignore you or pass along your complaint to some under official here in Canada who knows only too well where his bread and butter comes from. He al-ways sides in with his boss over the border-or he may lose his job.

Is it not about time some of these well paid union officials over the border were told that unless we are treated as an independent country, we have men with the brains to do their jobs over here and keep our money at home?

Putting Safety Into Driving

Sorry, but I am one of those who yawn hugely whenever I hear there is going to be another Safe Driving Week. Through the years I have seen too many enthuiastic educators of the public on road safety enter the arena only to retire utterly defeated, to expect any lasting good to come of appeals and moral persuasion.

At least twenty-five years ago it was realized that it is asking altogether too much of human nature to present men and women, a high proportion of them confident that they are uniquely skillful drivers, with powerful machines capable of very high speeds, and expect them to maintain the ample margin of safety which is the only effectual safeguard against accident.

The only difference today is that speed and power have increased sub-stantially. The same kind of human stantially. The same being is at the wheel.

Of course there is a remedy as anyone knows who has had the privilege of driving for long periods in that area in Washington State combining the U.S. Army base at Fort Lewis and the U.S. Air base at McChord. Everyone scrupulously obeys the speed limits imposed, ulously obeys the speed limits imposed, really stops at stop signs and no one overtakes a line of cars travelling at the maximum prescribed.

No woman dashes on to the parking lot of a PX or a Commissary as if the devil were behind her. Why? Because there is a more than 50-50 chance of detection by an efficient and ubiquitous service police and detection means the certain withdrawal of driving privileges by commanding officers who are moved by tears. Being practical men, they know that two cars approaching one another at the "snail's pace" of just under 41 miles per hour are eating up the space be-tween them at the rate of 10 yards every quarter of a second. Drivers comply with the law not so much because y want to but because they have to if they want to keep on driving.

PRESIDENT Kennedy's recent speech in New York prepares the way for the great and historic business of uniting the non-Communist world in one free or low tariff trading area. As this is achieved, problems like that of Berlin will become more manageable because the over all political and eco-nomic power of the West will be more than a match for the Communist world.

Lippmann

If this sounds like a big claim, imagine what the situation would be world split up into quarreling trading blocs Common Market, the other Europeans, the British, the Africans the Latin Americans, and the United States. No amount of beating our breasts about defeating Communism will be worth a tinker's dam if the West refuses to fore a sufficient degree of unity is achieved. Never before in history has a situation existed like that which we now face.

Until very recently the United States economy was unique. It was based on a rich continent in which trade was free, and on this continent the American people, who were drawn in the main from the highly civilized nations of Europe, produced for themselves a standard of life which is pre-eminent.

Only in the past few years, only, since the foundation of the Common Market in Western Europe, has there begun to exist in the Western world an economy capable of being compared with that of the United States.

Today, when it has become probable that Great Britain will join the Common Market, drawing with her in some form of association the rest of Western Eu rope, the United States must make itself ready to live and to trade with a free economy which will soon be larger our own, which is growing much faster than our own.

This confronts us and all the rest of problems that will have to be solved be the Western world with an overriding By Walter Lippmann, From Washington iestion. Do we come together in one great trading community which includes not only Western Europe and North America but also Japan, Australasia, Latin America, and Africa-or do we go our separate ways, fragmenting a non-Communist world?

This was the underlying theme of the President's speech to the National Association of manufacturers. It is of historic importance. Tariff debates are mighty dull reading and they are dull to write about, but the tariff debate which will begin in the next session of Congress will have incalculable signi-

There is reason to think that while the problem of our relations with the enlarged Common Market is a new one, there is already a remarkable awareness in this country that the problem must be

Thus when the magazine "Business Week" questioned 150 key executives, more than a quarter of them were found to be "strongly in favor" of the President's thesis. It is even more interesting that only "a scant 25 per cent voiced outright opposition." The other half were on the fence.

This does not mean, of course, that the President's program will have an easy time in Congress. For on the tariff, as we all know, individual Congressment listen very carefully to those weaker local Industries which believe they will unable to compete successfully with imported goods.

This array of local interests will have be dealt with by negotiation. The Administration will have to be prepared and able to do enough for them to enable them to make the adjustment with-

The argument against the new trade policy is likely to revolve around the flaim that American costs, owing to our high wages, are so high that we cannot compete successfully in a wider free market, in the course of the debate during the next months we shall have to take a careful look at this thesis, which sounds so plausible, and may, nevertheless, not be true.

One positive indication that higher costs have not priced the United States out of the world market is that as a matter of fact our exports of merchan-dise are larger by about three billion dollars a year than our imports of mer-chandise. Moreover, there is the fact that American wages tend to be highest in those very industries that export most successfully. They tend to be lower in those industries that rely on tariff to protect them against imports.

According to the high protectionists this ought not to be true. Why, then, is

By and large it is true because in the high wage industries labor is highly productive. It is highly productive because there is a greater investment of capital and there is more working and technical and managerial skill.

As compared with the averages for the Common Market countries, ican wages are between two and three times higher. But the productivity of American labor per hour is between two and three times greater. There is no reason to think that at this time the American economy as a whole cannot stand up competitively to the Common Market as a whole.

What, then, about the future? Europe with its enlarged markets will surely become even more productive than it is today. Not all of this increased productivity will go into lowering prices.
A considerable part of it undoubtedly will go into increasing European wages which, as a matter of fact, are rising faster than our own.

Nevertheless, the increased productivity of Europe will compel us to ourselves more competitive. No attempt at price fixing by the tariff mechanism could shield us from the increased efficiency of Europe. The increased com-petition will be good for the economy as a whole. It will be hard on the weaker elements in the economy, and they will have to be given some special.

But the reward of all this will be greater than the pain. For the reward will be a much richer American economy

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA—In researching a column item a fortnight ago about how hard civil ser-vants work, I inquired into the holidays that vants work, I inquired into the noneays was work, I inquired into the noneays government employees get off.

This brought to light the fact that Boxing Day, Dec. 26, is a working day in the santral provinces, although federal employed to the day off. The central provinces, although federal em-ployees elsewhere get the day oft. The reason for the seeming discrimination is that in Ontario they get Civic Holiday, the first Monday in August, and in Quebec they get Jean Baptiste Day, June 24, so it

This has not prevented Ottawa civil servants from asking for Boxing Day, and the day after New Year's as well. The old significance of Boxing Day has disappeared — practically nobody spends it boxing gifts for tradesmen and the like—and there is even historical excuse for taking Jan. 2 off.

However, New Year's rather than Christ-mas is the traditional day of French-Canadian merry-making and exchanging gifts. If English-Canadian civil servants get Dec. 26 off, French-Canadian civil servants would feel they were entitled to a holiday on Prime Minister Diefenbaker personally bestowed these two extra days off, with a cabinet decision that overrode the Civil Service Commission. It is difficult to view the government's action as anything but an effort to curry favor with civil servant voters at a time when an election is near. The fact that the administration would set aside a Civil Service Commission decision in such a picayune matter is significant too—it looks like admission that the election will be so close that even a handful of votes gained by bestowing extra holidays may be of great importance.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

I put in the same category as the extra didays the PM's announcement that he will have Parliament set up an independent commission to redistribute Commons' seats in accordance with the 1961 census' population distribution figures,

He charged the St. Laurent government in 1952 with "bare-faced gerrymandering" in the redistribution that abolished his old riding of Lake Centre. His commission, he will end "political manipulation" ridings.

In the past both parties have been guilty of gerrymandering. But this time the advantages the Conservatives could reap by redrawing the boundaries of constituences to their political benefit would be more than offset by a concurrent re-allocation of seats among the provinces. Moreover, Diefen-baker's condemnation of what happened in 1952 is on Hansard to embarrass him if he follows the same course in 1962.

By appointing an independent commis-on to redistribute the 265 Commons seats, Diefenbaker will effect a long overdue re-form—providing, of course, that the com-mission is truly independent and ponpartisan in fact and operation as well as in

But more importantly he will be able to use the appointment of a commission to avoid redistribution before the election. Tory prospects in Saskatchewan are brighter than a year ago, but redistribution will de-prive Saskatchewan of four seats. Other losers will be Tory Manitoba and Nova Scotia, and French Quebec. Provinces that will gain seats are the Social Credit strongholds of Alberta and British Columbia, and

My dentist is one of those phychological types who believe in mind over matter. He recently installed some phonographic equipment that is supposed to distract the patient and thus make the extractions and excava-

Or, if he begins to feel pain, he can turn squawking noise that deadens his senses

All of this is fine in theory, but to practice it doesn't work out too well, mainly because the music isn't suited to the occasion.

My dentist offers a choice of light clascs. Broadway show tunes or Lawrence Welk. As you can see, his taste runs heavily toward the rickey-tickey-boo school of

What is needed, obviously, is an album specifically tailored for dental work. A clever arranger should be able to put to-getner a musical score that would match orthophonics with orthodontics.

For instance, when the burr is ripping up the enamel, something spirited would be indicated, like maybe the "1812 Overture."
Then, just before the drill strikes a nerve, the theme song from "Dragnet" could be used to create suspense.

I'll leave it to someone more musically knowledgeable to find a number to accompany the tamping of the amalgam into the cavity. But, please, no Christmas carols!

Everything else in the picture on the preceding page is made of cellulose. For that matter, so is this newspaper! And so are some 6,000 other products - products so useful it's unlikely that you spend a day of your life without using several of them. . How long, then, will the supply last? As long as the world lasts! Cellulose comes from trees, and Rayonier Canada can produce over 400 million pounds of it a year. And since we manage British Columbia forest lands scientifically, we grow more cellulose than we harvest. So don't worry about shortages! Use all the cellulose you like - in cellophane, plastics, rayon, acetate, photo film, sausage casings and all the rest. We can go on producing it forever!

Eddie doesn't think much of the astuteness of Georg Agar, coach of the dull Blades, for letting him go. And he views the Chapman incident in the same vein. Dorohoy is quoted thusly in a Vancouver newspaper You know, I don't think much of this situation where they bring in Art Chapman to run the club over Maloney's head. They've never really appreciated Phil here, and this is part of it. Remember when I coached the Victoria Cougars? was 22. They made me coach because I was popular and they didn't have anyone else.

"When we landed in last place, Fred Hutchison, who was general manager, told me Babe Pratt was available and might come over to help me coach the guys for a little while. "I told Hutch I didn't like the idea; that I was the coach they hired, and that I should run the team.

"So Hutch never mentioned it again. But, you see what I mean? They asked me and when I said I didn't like it, they paid me the courtesy of doing it my way."

Eddie also tossed in another observation:

"... I got along in hockey for 14 years without Agar, and I'll be here 14 years after he's out."

Merger Shows U.K. Means To Compete

Courtaulds Textile Group is abroad as Britain's opening broadside to herald her ex-pected entry into the Euro-pean Common Market.

It is probably sending antici patory shudders through in-dustry in the six nations which now form the market— France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Until now it has been the British who were worried whether their economy was really ready for the historic step which will bind the nation economically to the continent. British businessmen ask them selves: "Can our industry com-pete?" Most of them think it

Time to Stop Worrying . And Buy Gifts-Fellows! By PENNY SAVER

Listen to any group of fellows at this season and you'llhear the same lament: "I just don't know what to get her" After weeks of pondering, moaning, groaning and putting off shopping, they suddenly realize there are only two more days left to shop and suddenly they rush to town to get something before it's too late. That "something" usually turns out to be the outstanding gift under the tree. Right? It's happened before and is sure to happen again this year.

But all kidding aside, fellows, if you're really stuck, take ook at these ideas.

Nothing would be nicer than cuddly nylon shag slippers. At first look they would appear to be a ball of fluff, but on closer examination they turn out to have a place for feet. They are nylon fleece lined, have a chamois sole and are in hosiery sizes in shades of yellow and white and coral and white. Nothing but the slippers will be warmer than her smile when she sees these. They are only $4.95.

How about a matching sweater and skirt? They're very popular and really smart. Cardigans and pullovers are $7.95. They're made of lambgora, a combination of lambs wool and angora. Sleeves are fully fashioned, cardigans with full-length sleeves and pullovers three-quarter length. In soft shades of coral, green, black, turquoise, blue and brown, she'll love you for giving her one of these.

Skirts are lovely, all wool, for $9.95. They're in soft shades too, and if you are picking one choose it to match or to contrast.

With New Year's following close on the heels of Christmas, she'll be thrilled if you present her with a new evening bag. Saw some lovely ones in silver or gold brocade, or gold sequin, with matching metal trim and chain; black beaded clutch, black jersey and white or black satin clutch bags. All were well made, dainty and attractive for $3.95 each.

Are you a last-minute worrier? Call me and I'll give you Penny, EV 2-3131

West opened the three of hearts on the theory that attack is the best defence. South called for the NORTH (D) 21 queen of hearts from dummy. It held the dummy. It held the trick and he proceeded to run off six club tricks. He discarded four diamonds from his own hand.
West's discards were made in this order: three of spades, deuce and five of diamonds;

$1,803 Fair Profits Sets Cowichan Record

DUNCAN—A profit of $1,803 on the Cowichan Exhibition this year, the highest in the long history of the fair, was reported this week at the annual meeting of the Cowichan Agricultural Society.

Miss Mary Waldon, president, asid the profit will permit a carryover of $859 into next year's balance sheet. She said the surplus was the result of the other $100 that he would the surplus was the result of co-operation received from community service clubs, commercial firms and inflividuals in the staging of the fair.

She then reported on the purchase, in her name on behalf of the society, of 3.6 acres of land adjoining the present exhibition grounds. This, she said will ease the increasing pressure on the fair's livestock sections and give direct road access to Duncan Street.

Miss Waldon was re-elected president, with Dr. D. Lott, Stan Owens and Harry Westwick as vice-presidents.
